ECONOMETRIC SOCIETY SUMMER SCHOOL in DYNAMIC STRUCTURAL ECONOMETRICS (DSE)

Theme: Expectations and Learning in Dynamic Structural Models

University College London

June 30-July 6, 2025

Application deadline: March 31, 2025

We are pleased to announce the next event in the sequence of Econometric Society summer schools in Dynamic Structural Econometrics.

The DSE summer school equips early and mid-stage PhD students with tools and hands-on computational instruction in formulating, solving, and estimating dynamic structural econometric models, with particular focus on methods for incorporating learning and subjective beliefs in the models, and using the models for policy evaluation in a variety of empirical applications in fields such as development, labor, industrial organization, public economics, and macroeconomics. The course program will be available at the DSE website <http://dseconf.org> along with details on previous events.

The 2025 DSE summer school consists of five days of lectures and will run alongside the 2025 Dynamic Structural Econometrics conference
“Expectations and Learning in Dynamic Structural Models”,
July 3-4, 2025.

We invite submissions in all areas of structural econometrics and related fields.
Submission deadline is March 31, 2025.

Invited speakers and lecturers of the 2025 DSE summer school and conference include:

- Victor Aguirregabiria (University of Toronto)
- Orazio Attanasio (Yale University)
- Stephane Bonhomme (University of Chicago)
- Jochem De Bresser (Tilburg University)
- Fedor Iskhakov (Australian National Uni)
- Arnaud Maurel (Duke University)
- Robert A. Miller (Carnegie Mellon University)
- Ariel Pakes (Harvard University)
- Aureo de Paula (University College London)
- John Rust (Georgetown University)
- Bertel Schjerning (Uni of Copenhagen)
- Michela Tincani (University College London)
- Yu Zheng (Queen Mary University)

Interested students and presenters are invited to submit their applications via the DSE website

<http://dseconf.org>

Every applicant must be a member of the Econometric Society at the time of application. To join the Society, visit the Society homepage <http://www.econometricsociety.org>.
